Global Change & Sustainability Center
Spring 2018 Seminars

January 9, 2018
Kari Norgaard, Department of Sociology, University of Oregon
"Climate Change as Strategic Opportunity: Imagination, Responsibility, and Community"

January 23, 2018
Kip Solomon, Department of Geology & Geophysics, University of Utah
"Can Groundwater Feed the World? It’s All About Time."

February 6, 2018
Edella Schlager, School of Government & Public Policy, University of Arizona
"Water Scarcity, Governance, and Adaptation in Western Transboundary River Basins"

February 20, 2018
Sarah Kanouse, Department of Art + Design, Northeastern University
"Entanglements: artistic strategies for complex ecologies"

March 6, 2018
Sarah George, Executive Director, Natural History Museum of Utah
"Climate Change at the Natural History Museum: Research and Interpretation"

March 27, 2018
Bryn Dentinger, Department of Biology, University of Utah
Sustaining Biodiversity

April 10, 2018
David N. Pellow, Environmental Studies Program, UC Santa Barbara
"Environmental Justice: Exploring and Advancing an Evolving Field of Scholarship and Politics"

ENVIRONMENT.UTAH.EDU
Now in its 8th year, the GCSC Seminar Series presents some of the best interdisciplinary researchers – from around campus and across the country - whose work sheds light on global change and sustainability.

SUST 6800
Students who enroll in this 1 credit course have opportunities to explore sustainability in an interdisciplinary cohort and are invited to have lunch with speakers.